

Students try out their originality

STUDENTS from Pimlico State High School (pictured) worked alongside former lead singer of Chocolate Starfish at a musical workshop on Hamilton Island recently.

Fifty students from across North Queensland attended the two-day workshop, Muso Magic, earlier this month where they wrote, performed and recorded their own original contemporary songs.

Parliamentary secretary to the Premier in North Queensland and Member for Mundingburra Lindy Nelso-Carr said Muso Magic was an exciting opportunity for students to figure in a unique educational experience.

Students learned about the fundamentals of song-writing, music production and performance from someone who had achieved national success within the music industry.

“The program focused on students’ self-expression and building self-confidence as they work together to write, perform and record a professionally-produced original song,” she said.
